Welcome to OUR LADY of GRACE!

Welcome to all who are joining us for the celebration of the Eucharist. There are many ways and parish organizations to participate in our life in Christ. See the directory on page 7.

We invite all who attend OLG to become registered members of our parish. Registration forms are available on the table in the main entry of the church or the parish office. Registration allows us to communicate and effectively provide for your needs. It is necessary for baptism, marriage, and godparent or sponsor certification.

Mindfulness of Others—Please silence all devices and refrain from using them during the liturgy. The parish has a Children's Chapel located in the northwest corner of the church. Parents are welcome to make use of this chapel with restless children. We ask that this chapel, like the church itself, remain free of food and drink.

Allergies—The first morning Mass of the Sunday or feast day will always be incense-free.

ALICE CAMILLE

KNOWING HOW TO READ THE SIGNS

How would any of us survive the complexity of the 21st century without signs? I'm a big fan of all kinds of signs and indicators: like the ones that inform me how far it is to the next rest stop or the numbers on the bathroom scales that tell me to lay off the pasta for a while, weather reports that extend into the middle of next week, and regular doctor's checkups that make sure I'm not missing anything crucial to my health. Any hints about where I am and how that relates to what I should do or expect in the future are gratefully appreciated. Signs are the closest things we've got to fortune telling, a way of foreseeing at least what's around the nearest bend.

One sign that stays in my memory is a road sign I saw every day on the highway our bus traveled to the regional high school. Prepare to meet God the sign read in large black letters. I thought at the time that it was chilling: What an awful thing to see on the road, as you were speeding between tons of potentially bone-crushing metal! But as I reflected on it over the years, it was a very pertinent sign, at least as useful as the ones that say "Stop" or "Deer Crossing" or "Dip." We ought to prepare to meet God in every hour of every day. If it takes a sign to remind us of that good advice, then bring on the billboards.

God crossings

The earliest religious impulse seems to have been the attempt to read the heavens for a sign of what God was up to. Was the deity angry with the people or pleased with their behavior? Did God want them to go to war or refrain from battle? Was the lack of rain a sign that more sacrifices were required, or was there no relationship between the fortunes of humanity and the moods of divinity? Learning to read the signs from heaven was an art reserved to priests and prophets. They were practiced at knowing when an event was directed by mortals and when it came as a communication from God.

Perhaps prescientific people saw history as heavily scored by "God crossings," what we might today call, unflatteringly, "acts of God." These close encounters of a celestial kind directed and evaluated human history. Modern people may err on the opposite side of the spectrum: We view almost nothing as a sign of God's presence and participation in our world.

This bias may make it difficult for us to appreciate the Gospel of John, anchored as it is on the seven signs of Jesus' self-revelation as one with God in glory. The multiplication of the loaves, which is the fourth sign, was meant to reveal that Jesus is one with the source of our life, that he is "manna from heaven" for the hungry spirit. But people didn't get it then, any more than they would if it happened today. The sign of abundance is so spectacular, they take it at face value. They don't want "Jesus, the bread of life." They just want more bread!

What signs are for Signs are only as useful as the accuracy of their interpretation. If we get fixated on the sign itself, we can lose perspective. Imagine the woman who fastens her hope on becoming a perfect size five. It's just a number, and by no means promises health or happiness. It may even be physiologically impossible, given her height and bone structure. But the number gets confused with the dream of well-being, and pretty soon the number becomes more important than the thing it is meant to signify.

Or imagine the fellow who sees the roadway sign that reads "Dip." What if, instead of seeing it as a warning of an upcoming event, he regards it as a personal insult? It could well become a self-fulfilling prophecy in a matter of minutes if he fails to understand the sign correctly!

Those who misread the miracle of loaves and fishes as a sign that Jesus was a free lunch were much deceived. Jesus wasn't saying, "Don't work anymore, because God is going to feed you." Those who remember the story of Exodus know that the morning manna stopped after Israel reached the promised land. The first bread from heaven was a sign that the people could trust in God to sustain them in the desert. The second instance of miracle bread pointed to Jesus as food for the life of the world. Jesus urged the crowds to look beyond perishable food, but their bellies compelled them to ask plaintively, "Sir, give us this bread always." By any other name, they still wanted their daily loaf.

Look beyond the bread you eat

The most difficult thing a mortal can do is lift his or her attention from the tangible to the intangible. One brief growl from the stomach and we're back to wondering what's for lunch. Mortal living requires our attention: washing, dressing, feeding, moving about, making a living, maintaining our relationships, running for cover at the first sign of rain. How can we be expected to look past the demands of this world to ruminate on the next?

We may catch the mistake right there, in that we immediately think other-worldly when we think of God. If we learn anything from God crossings, it's that God is a whole lot closer to our reality than we think. And the "eternal life" Jesus offers us has already started—it isn't something that's in cold storage until after the Apocalypse. We need bread from heaven now, because we live astride both realities, our physical and spiritual lives in continual juxtaposition as if we're standing on the corner of Earth and kingdom all the time, which we are. The bread we eat today is never enough. That's why it leaves us hungry for more.
