Jan 5 Food and Fellowship Sunday

Sponsored by the members of the International Catholic Families (ICF) organization
On the menu: Breakfast Surprise!

Jan 12 School Sunday

Sponsored by OLG School Families
Complimentary coffee, juice and donuts. Contributions not necessary but gratefully accepted. Proceeds benefit OLG School's Tuition Assistance Fund, the Gerard Family Endowment for Catholic Education.

Welcome to OUR LADY of GRACE!

Welcome to all who are joining us for the celebration of the Eucharist. There are many ways and parish organizations to participate in our life in Christ. See the directory on page 7.

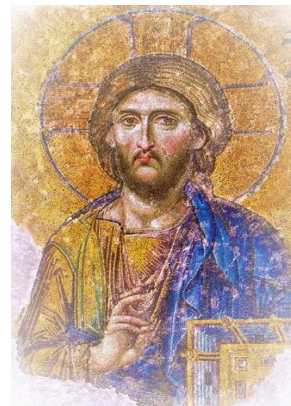

We invite all who attend OLG to become registered members of our parish. Registration forms are available on the table in the main entry of the church or the parish office. Registration allows us to communicate and effectively provide for your needs. It is necessary for baptism, marriage, and godparent or sponsor certification.

Mindfulness of Others—Please silence all devices and refrain from using them during the liturgy. The parish has a Children's Chapel located in the northwest corner of the church. Parents with restless children are welcome to make use of this chapel at any time during Mass should it be necessary. We ask that this chapel, like the church itself, remain free of food and drink.

Allergies—The first morning Mass of the Sunday or holy day will always be incense-free. The Sunday 11:00 am Mass will always include the use of incense.

Invitation to the R.C.I.A.

Our Lady of Grace Parish welcomes all who seek to enrich their faith life and explore the possibility of becoming a Catholic Christian. Our community shares and celebrates this journey with them through a process called "The Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults." If you are curious about what Catholics believe and may be interested in learning more about joining the Catholic faith—or perhaps you are an adult Catholic looking to be fully initiated—you are cordially invited to enter the R.C.I.A. process and experience a new and enriched meaning to your life through renewed faith and love. For more info, please contact Deacon John Sawaya at (858) 869-5079 or jsawaya@olg-church.org.

A Parent's Dreams

I'm not a parent, so I may be stepping out on a limb in discussing what the dreams of a parent look like. But not too long a limb, because I do have six brothers and sisters who are parents, plus I had parents myself who had dreams for me. Because the average Catholic preacher, we might assume, is similarly handicapped in the offspring department, I think we can at least rely on the fact that we all have dreams for those we love. These dreams are powerful things, too. They can create reality and become the liberation—or suffocation—of those who are their subject. What are the elements of a parent's dreams for his or her child? Hope is a primary ingredient, and it can take many forms: a generic hope for happiness, health, and well-being, or a more specific notion of a successful life. Some parents dream that their children will be doctors, lawmakers, or CEOs. Others just want grandchildren. One of my sisters wants her children to excel in school so they can take the world by storm. My other sister hopes her kids will learn to laugh and enjoy life. I've heard parents say they don't care what their kids do so long as they remain close to the family religion and values. Others say the next generation needs to find its own way, and all we can do is give them a good example and some room to make thoughtful decisions. Some parents' dreams for their children, of course, sound more like nightmares. The pressure can be intense to live up to Mom's ambitions or to fulfill Dad's unmet goals. And then there are the negative expectations heaped upon the kids. I've heard parents say, within earshot of their son, "He's my dumb boy. He'll never amount to anything." Or "She's a bad girl. She's going to be trouble." Does it surprise us that not a few of these prophecies parents make for their children are swiftly and accurately realized?

Parents' dreams for their children can harness them to the stars or condemn them to ruin. Having no expectations of their children may be the worst thing of all.

Honor within families

Ben Sira wants children to honor their fathers and mothers. This is in keeping with the Fourth Commandment, which is the first commandment governing our relationship to fellow human beings. Right after the three commandments about what we owe to God comes this injunction about what we owe to our parents. It's that serious.

In terms of psychology, parents are our original gods. They are the supreme authorities that govern our lives: our creators, sustainers, teachers, and role models. We are made in their image, and we are in most respects their creatures. So it's no wonder that, just after God, we are commanded to honor Mom and Dad. But what does this honor entail? Not worship, but obedience, respect, and reverence, for starters. Later, when we are grown and they are failing, we owe them our protection and support as well. It will be up to Saint Paul later to add the recommendation: "Parents, do not nag your children, lest they lose heart." The idea that there is something like honor due to children as sacred persons before God in their own right is a late-developing idea, but better late than never.

Subordination, anyone?

Children are obviously subordinate to adults in nearly every circumstance. "Give Grandma your chair" is just good sense, of course, and no one is arguing that all sense of hierarchy is a bad thing. Grown-ups get to make the rules, and children do have to bend to the agenda of their parents, teachers, and older siblings, to name a few. Subordination is good training for the grown-up world in which we have to obey the rules of the company, submit to the agenda of the employer, accept the laws of the government, or face the penalty for not doing so. It also prepares us for the spiritual reality that God is sovereign, divine laws are in operation, and ignoring their authority opens us to a world of hurt we call sin, suffering, and death.

But because we live in a world where sin happens, subordination spins out of control and becomes an oppressive and destructive force. Once creation was subject to Adam and Eve, and that was a good thing. They acted as stewards for the innocence of the Garden and its creatures. But add sin, and stewards easily become ravagers, guardians turn into jailers, and kings morph into tyrants. There may have been a time when the idea of a wife's subordination to her husband was a helpful and protective measure for the physically more vulnerable woman. It would be harder to defend the notion now, especially as we've seen what centuries of subordination did for females, not to mention vulnerable minorities of every kind.

Joseph has a dream for his family

Like his ancestor of the same name in Genesis, Joseph is a dreamer, and his night visions become vividly realized in the daytime. The content of his dreams might approach the realm of nightmares: First, he is asked to take a pregnant girl to wife and trust in God for the outcome. Then he is asked to become a fugitive, because the child his wife has borne is marked for death by no less than the king of the land. Finally, he is guided to believe that the threat is over, and he can take his family home with confidence. But Joseph doesn't go back to Judea—can we blame his insecurity? Instead, he resettles in the northern town of Nazareth, away from the perils of the past that have haunted his family.

Did Joseph have the usual dreams of family life as well? Hopes for a peaceful home for his wife and son, and a life that was normal, stable, and profitable? Whatever dreams Joseph might have had before the first visitation by an angel in the nighttime, he had to surrender them for the greater dream God was offering him and the whole world. Nothing about Joseph's family would ever be typical or predictable. But everything about it would be full of grace.

What is the Purpose of Incense?

Incense comes from the Latin word for “something burned.” Smoke rises toward the sky, traditionally the dwelling place of the divine; it’s no surprise that the psalm popularly prayed in the Liturgy of the Hours declares: “Let my prayer be incense before you” (Psalm 141:1-2). We also “lift up our hearts” to God in prayer at every Mass. Everything that goes to God, goes up. It was produced from the resin of trees and burned either in a swinging thurible pot or a stationary brazier. Before the Second Vatican Council the use of incense was restricted only to High Masses. Now it can be used at any Mass: to honor the sacrament, the assembly and presider, the gospel book, the ambo and altar. Incense is also used to reverence the body of the deceased at funerals—reminding us that the destiny of the loved one, as our own destiny, is to unite with God in the life to come. As liturgist Paul Philibert elegantly expresses it: “Incense, the fragrant, lovely substance that allows itself to be consumed and to float off into indeterminate space beyond our reach, signifies the loving entrustment of our lives to God’s providence.”
