Welcome to OUR LADY of GRACE!

Welcome to all who are joining us for the celebration of the Eucharist. There are many ways and parish organizations to participate in our life in Christ. See the directory on page 7.

We invite all who attend OLG to become registered members of our parish. Registration forms are available on the table in the main entry of the church or the parish office. Registration allows us to communicate and effectively provide for your needs. It is necessary for baptism, marriage, and godparent or sponsor certification.

Mindfulness of Others—Please silence all devices and refrain from using them during the liturgy. The parish has a Children's Chapel located in the northwest corner of the church. Parents with restless children are welcome to make use of this chapel at any time during Mass should it be necessary. We ask that this chapel, like the church itself, remain free of food and drink.

Allergies—The first morning Mass of the Sunday or holy day will always be incense-free.

Invitation to the R.C.I.A.

Our Lady of Grace Parish welcomes all who seek to enrich their faith life and explore the possibility of becoming a Catholic Christian. Our community shares and celebrates this journey with them through a process called "The Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults." If you are curious about what Catholics believe and may be interested in learning more about joining the Catholic faith—or perhaps you are an adult Catholic looking to be fully initiated—you are cordially invited to enter the R.C.I.A. process and experience a new and enriched meaning to your life through renewed faith and love. For more info, please contact Deacon John Sawaya at (858) 869-5079 or jsawaya@olg-church.org.

GUEST COLUMNIST

ALICE CAMILLE

Apocalypse (any day) Now

Is it me, or is it the times? Apocalyptic writings used to seem so surreal and unbelievable that those parts of the Bible—say, Revelation, Daniel, Ezekiel, Malachi, and snippets of Paul and the gospels—just didn't have a hearing in me. I dismissed those passages as morbid and fantastic, products of an age that didn't have its act together and could only envision release from its chaos in terms of total annihilation. Well, guess what: These days, apocalyptic literature has the whole world sitting up and paying attention. It's starting to make sense and sound unhappily familiar. Lately, we begin to suspect those times are ours, and that vision is not so outrageous after all.

Apocalyptic feeling is the sort of thing that comes around every few generations. Human history is remarkably messy, and depending on when and where you are born, your window on the world may make John of Patmos sound like a man of understatement. It's no accident that both Hebrew and Christian scripture end with apocalypse. Malachi is the proper end of the Hebrew scroll, and the last line of the prophecy was originally "Lest I come and strike the land with doom" in verse 24. "Doom" being such a pessimistic note on which to end, the rabbis went back and repeated verse 23 as a coda: "Lo, I will send you Elijah, the prophet, Before the day of the Lord comes, the great and terrible day." This is supposed to be more comforting. Whether or not we hear it that way, of course, depends on where in the theater of history we are sitting.

Malachi's problem

The prophecies of Malachi, literally "my messenger," are from the post-exilic period, when the temple is already rebuilt and running. But things are not as good as such circumstances might imply. Unsurprisingly, starting over after the return from Babylon led to complications: what to do with the reality of foreign wives and their idolatrous ways, and how to deal with careless liturgical practices at the temple. Near-contemporary prophets like Haggai and Zechariah were more optimistic about the nation making a comeback. They believed that a refurbished temple and new leadership were signs that a bright new day for Israel was dawning. Their prophecies reflect an enthusiasm for the future that Malachi no longer shares.

What went wrong? The hoped-for reign of Zerubbabel most predominantly. Back in the time of the exile, Jeremiah prophesied that the royal house of Israel, then led by one Jehoiachin, was through. God snatched the messianic line of kings from the royal hand like a signet ring and tossed it into the dust bowl of history. No heir of Jehoiachin would ever sit on the throne in Israel. But after the exile, Haggai exuberantly disagreed, calling Jehoiachin's grandson Zerubbabel a new signet ring that would rule with God's full blessing. Zechariah seconded the motion with a coronation prophecy, and even Ezekiel anticipated such a time. But the name of Zerubbabel was later expunged from the text and replaced with the name of the man who would actually ascend to leadership, Joshua his assistant. The sequence of events is unclear, and it could be that foreign powers intervened before the line of David could be reestablished. But the prophecy of a return to the era of the messiah-king was not fulfilled. This plunged the nation and its current prophet into a mood of fatalism. God was obviously not going to be moved on this score, and without the blessed house of David in charge, cataclysm seemed like the best way out of the cul-de-sac of history in which they were marooned.

Fast-forward to Jerusalem A.D.

Five centuries after the exile, the hope of the nation was invested in the Jerusalem temple. The throne of David seemed irretrievably lost to history, and puppet kings like the Herodians were a national joke. The temple was the center of divine authority, not to mention the last stand of national identity, and if God were ever going to rescue the nation from its oppressors and reestablish the messiah-king of Israel, it would be from this spot, Mount Zion.

Imagine then in this context hearing the words of Jesus dismissing the temple like a pile of stones easily thrown down! If even the temple should not be viewed as the fortress of God's presence and the emblem of Israel's future, then where might one look for such things? It was no use to explain that the house of David had at last arrived to claim its kingship; that the presence of God could not come more fully into their midst than where it stood right now; that the hour they were waiting for was this one. Jesus had been proclaiming the Kingdom for some years now. Those who had ears had already heard, and those who didn't, wouldn't.

The arrival of Jesus in Jerusalem was the apocalypse, "the great and terrible day," come blazing like an oven to reduce evildoers to stubble. For others it was the arrival of the son of justice with healing in its rays. Once again, our seat in the theater of history affects which reality is coming our way.

Do the kings and the temples matter?

Obviously, the time to trust in the citadels of worldly power is past. Heaven knows we still need to vote, affiliate with a church and creed, make a living and not a nuisance of ourselves, consider carefully and critically the wars and cataclysms of our time. The world still engages us mightily, and we should responsibly return the favor. But we must not be deceived in these endeavors that the goal of our efforts is in this vortex of messy history. All that we see here—a day will come when it will all be thrown down. No king can promise us safety, and no temple can guarantee our righteousness. The one thing that matters is our moment of testimony. When all is said and done—and it will be—in whom is our trust?

Mental prayer in my opinion is nothing else than an intimate sharing between friends; it means taking time frequently to be alone with Him who we know loves us. The important thing is not to think much but to love much and so do that which best stirs you to love. Love is not great delight but desire to please God in everything.

What Does the Catechism say about...

Assisted Suicide?

God's creative action is present to every human life and is thus the source of its sacred value. Each human life remains in a relationship with God, who is the final goal of every man and woman.

The Fifth Commandment calls us to foster the physical, spiritual, emotional and social well-being of self and others. For that reason, it forbids murder, abortion, euthanasia and any life-threatening acts. We are called to create the culture of life and work against the culture of death.

Regardless of the motives or means, euthanasia consists of putting to death those who are sick, are disabled, or are dying and it is morally unacceptable.
