Welcome to OUR LADY of GRACE!

Welcome to all members and visitors who are joining us for the celebration of the Eucharist.

If you have been away from the Church for a little while or for quite some time, but now feel a tug at your heart calling you back to the Catholic Church, welcome home!

If you feel drawn to the Catholic Church yet come from another faith tradition - or have no faith experience at all - we are glad you are here!

The Catholic Church has been teaching truth since she was founded by Christ over 2,000 years ago. We invite you to enrich your life through joining our parish family. In addition to our liturgies there are many ministries and service groups that help you to build friendships and serve our parish along with the greater community. We also offer life-long learning through our many faith formation opportunities for children and adults.

For baptized Catholics needing to complete their Sacraments of Initiation please contact our Director of Catechetical Ministry, Lissa Hutcheson, at (619) 466-5656. For those interested in joining the Catholic Church, please contact Deacon John Sawaya at (858) 869-5079. You can also contact them by using the "Contact us" link at olg-church.org.

Something to Talk About

The first human words recorded in the Bible occur at the creation of the woman. The man had nothing to say about his own creation, perhaps subdued at the idea of conversation with the Creator. And then woman arrives on the scene, and the man, who has made no utterances apart from the day-in, day-out grind of inventing names for the animals, suddenly becomes positively poetic: "This one, at last, is bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh!" Because naming things has been the only occupation of his short life thus far, he promptly names this newcomer. He is literal about it, too, imagination probably flagging after long hours of saying, "Bluebird, blackbird, yellow-bellied sapsucker . . ." The newcomer is simply heralded as "woman," the one taken out of the man. What else can this fledgling male say about woman, in his limited experience? He has no idea yet how far out of man she can be.

Men have had other names for women since then, and women have come up with plenty of things to call the men in their lives as well. Like scripture says, the two cling to each other, need each other, and sometimes come together as closely as a single life. A lot more poetry has come out of that union. Yet all too often, these two are also deeply divided, like a bone dislocated from its fellow bone, or flesh torn away from flesh. In many lands, times, cultures, and contexts, men and women have been so far from each other as to be virtual enemies of the other's fulfillment. For the sake of accuracy, it should be said that patriarchy more often prevents the progress of women, because institutions are better than individuals at getting their way.

Yet the scene at the close of Genesis chapter 2 is tranquil and hopeful. The man has found his woman. He seems enthusiastic at the proposition. This time, it's the woman who has nothing to say about the situation in which she finds herself.

"Is it lawful for a husband to divorce his wife?"

The Pharisees betray their patriarchal worldview when they put their question to Jesus. While it's true that the ruling in Deuteronomy chapter 24 does presume that the man initiates divorce proceedings, the response of Jesus acknowledges that a woman might also divorce her husband. Josephus sides with the Pharisees in his description of who divorces whom, but Jewish texts from Egypt five centuries earlier suggest that Jewish women of the Diaspora, at least, had a procedure for divorcement. Roman women of the period certainly did, and Jesus (or Mark) was aware of that.

What no one here mentions is that the circumstance of divorce described in Mosaic law is highly specific, not making the case for divorce so much as prohibiting a particular kind of remarriage, i.e., taking back an earlier wife who has had, in the meantime, a second husband. This particular wife has been "put away" twice because both husbands find "something obnoxious" about her, according to the Tanakh translation. (The NAB prefers "something indecent"; NRSV something objectionable"; REV "something offensive"; the Douay and the KJV settled for "some uncleanness.") My personal favorite is Today's English Version, which says plainly "something about her he doesn't like." It's not clear why a man would remarry such a woman, but this is no time for an analyst. This specific case regarding a vaguely unsatisfying woman was in time extrapolated into the full-scale machinery of chronic divorce. It is to this, we might imagine, that Jesus objects in such strong and absolute terms, throwing the Sixth Commandment into the balance for good measure.

What's lawful today

Homiletic theory dictates that Sunday Mass is no time for catechesis. But when it comes to the church's teaching on marriage (like Jesus, we don't have teachings on divorce), so much misinformation abounds that it might be considered "good news" to offer clarifications.

Matrimony is a sacrament of the church: a call to fidelity, a vocation to family life, a consecrated union for the betterment of the partners. The church is primarily concerned with the sacramental character of that bond and whether it is properly understood and lived out. Where a valid sacrament exists, nothing can diminish or deny it, just as consecrated bread and wine remains the Body and Blood of Christ, and the baptized remain baptized.

Divorce, when it occurs, is not a sin. Marriages end for a lot of reasons that may include occasions and habits of sin, but the civil action of divorce does not negate a Catholic's standing with the church. (The Council of Baltimore in 1843 did call for excommunicating the divorced, but that censure was removed by the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884.) Anyone convicted by a sense of moral wrongdoing, including individuals whose marriages have ended, should feel welcome to celebrate the sacrament of Reconciliation.

Many believe they are automatically excommunicated if they remarry after divorce. The American bishops lifted that excommunication in 1977.

Many fear that, should they pursue an annulment, it will "erase" their marriage and make their children illegitimate in the eyes of the church. Annulment is concerned with the validity of the sacrament and makes no claims about the reality of the civil marriage. The church concerns itself only with the sacramental bond.

"Let the children come to me"

Jesus wasn't setting a tender trap when he came down hard on the separation of husbands and wives. It is instructive that Mark segues immediately into Jesus welcoming the children, which is for church and society the fruit of marriage: to create a welcoming, nurturing environment for the next generation. Modern life (and its conventions and chemistry) has separated the institution of marriage from that of family. Marriage is now largely regarded as a matter of romance. Family is too often described in terms of choice, vanity, or affordability. Which catapults us into a generation in which we now find ourselves arguing the very definition of marriage.

Somewhere in all this, the church is calling us to consider not gay bashing or a war on single moms, but the idea that matrimony is consecrated because life is sacred, and matrimony is the basket around which the next generation is woven. If we could all start there, we might get somewhere really good.
